Dear Jon,

I am writing to thank you for the support that you and all at Brentford Football Club have provided to assist with London's response to the coronavirus crisis.

It was wonderful to see a range of organisations from across the capital, including London's football clubs, come together to support the NHS and our communities through the height of the pandemic. I am confident that these collaborative efforts will now continue as we emerge out of lockdown and look towards recovery.

The service that Brentford Football Club has provided to the local community through the #BeeatHome campaign has been incredibly valuable and the support the NHS has received from your doctors and medical team returning to the NHS has been crucial. I know that there will have been a huge amount of work involved to make this happen. Your time and care in supporting the NHS and London are greatly appreciated.

This crisis has highlighted how vital the NHS is to London's communities, and how we can harness the resources of generous organisations to help keep Londoners safe and healthy. I hope the networks and connections built over the last few months can continue to support a strong NHS and help keep communities together.

Thank you again for all the work that you have done.

Yours sincerely,

Sadiq Khan

Mayor of London
